Bank Showing. The week-end news was not particularly absorbing. Bank clearings for the week showed only a trivial increase, taking the country as a whole, a fact that was attributable to the curtailment of stock market activity in the eastern centers. The trade reviews reported further progress in the adjustment of markets to higher prices, but there were some inti-mations that a let-up in the pace of industry and commerce was not unlikely in the near future.

Foreign exchange for the week showed a firm tone, with a slight net advance in demand sterling. The substreasury gained $311,000 cash from the banks yesterday and transferred $200,000 to Chicago this morning for their account.

Today the asking price at the close was 217, with 2161/2 bid. These levels suggest that buyers may have in mind the dividend of $7.50, which is payable on each share at the end of the coming month.

Lanston was offered today at half a point less than yesterday, namely, at 18%; but that was at the close, after the sale of 100 shares at 18%.

Greene Cananea copper also moved up slightly. A quotation lot of 100 shares sold for 12%, while the day before 12 was paid. After this transaction the stock was to be had at 121/2, while the bid was 124.

The mention of the name of Guggenheimer during the trading may offer an explanation of the appreciation which has taken place in the market value of this stock during the past few weeks. If Greene is not included in the much-talkedof merger of copper interests, the predictions of some of the operators will have the post office.

Appointed From Missouri and Maintains Residence

Dr. Charles Paxton Grandfield, the new postmaster of Washington, was born in Montgomery county, Mo., September 29, 1861. He was educated in the public high and normal schools of Fulton, Carrollton and Warrensburg, Mo. His father was the Rev. Dennis M.

Grandfield, a minister of the Disciples of Christ. His frequent change of station carried with it the change of residence of his family. After Dr. Grandfield was graduated from the State Normal School at Warrensburg he went to Denver, Col., and spent some time in the wholesale fruit and grocery business. He was also engaged in civil engineering with a party which surveyed the route now known as the Fort Worth and Denver railroad. then the Denver and New Orleans road. Office Department August 26, 1885. In December, 1885, he returned to Troy, Mo., where he married Miss Jennie M. McKee, daughter of A. V. McKee, of that section. He returned to this city with his bride and has lived here ever since, although still retaining his legal residence and the right to vote in Mis-

Dr. Grandfield has two daughters, Clara, aged twenty, and Helen, aged sixteen 13% years. The former, as the result of her standing in the Washington Normal School, this year received an appointment as kindergarten teacher in the Phelps School.

Promotion From Ranks. In the Post Office Department Dr. Grandfield was promoted through every grade to the chief clerkship of the office of first assistant postmaster general. He was made chief clerk by promotion from the position of assistant superintendent of salaries and allowances, at $2,250, March 1, 1900.

He resigned the chief clerkship February 28, 1909, and the following day was appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate as first assistant postmaster general, succeeding Frank H. Hitchcock, now Postmaster General, who retired to take up the burdens of the presidential campaign.

Dr. Grandfield is a physician by profession, having received his degree of doctor of medicine at Howard University in 1889. He lives in his own home at 949 S street northwest.

STAUNTON, Va., November 13.-Mob-By taking care of Mr. Grandfield in the ism was folled of its prey here last Washington post office Mr. Hitchcock will night when an unruly gathering surged about the city in an attempt to wrest from the authorities and lynch Clifton Beckenridge, a negro, charged with repeated attempts of criminal assault on spect to the Washington post office has completely forestalled the efforts of friends of a dozen or so candidates, who have been planning to make an early descent on the White House to get in their work on the President. Many of them have already been to see the county prison. Excitement ran high during the night, but the sheriff and chief of police succeded in protecting the neof police succeded in protecting the negro from the vengeance of the mob. Beckenridge, whose home is Waynesboro, was serving a term in the jall and was a trusty about the prison. When the news that he had assaulted the jailor's granddaughter and that he was said to have made a full confession to the chief of police spread about the city, a mob quickly gathered.

Cause Bells to Be Rung. The leaders, believing that an attempt would be made to remove Breckenridge from the city by train, had the fire bells rung in order to swell the membership of chosen a recognized local man for the and also the railway station, but failed in their efforts to capture the negro. The sheriff and chief of police were powerless to prevent the gathering, but their carefully made arrangements were completely successful in keeping the negro under cover and preventing his being lynched by the angry people.

Today the city has quieted down, but the feeling is still strong. The authorities are guarding Breckenridge.

> AIRSHIP MODEL ON VIEW. Wright Machine on Third Floor of Saks & Co.'s Store.

A model, complete in every detail, of the Wright flying machine was today placed on exhibition on the third floor of the Saks & Company's establishment, 7th street and Pennsylvania avenue, for the entertainment of all who will be interested in aeronautics. The exhibit is in charge of an amateur aeroplanist.

The model was made in Dayton, Ohio, by Milton Wright, jr., a nephew of the famous aviators. It is constructed on a ton man for the position, and was some- foot, and a small electric motor is used in what disappointed, of course, that his place of a gasoline engine.
